To understand this concept you have to come to a new realization, and that is in the age of internet marketing the real money comes from passive or residual income. Residual income keeps coming long after you closed the deal. This is the name of the game and it is extremely profitable to use this model when going into business. Thanks to the internet all this is accessible to anyone willing to map out a plan. Great business models concentrate on transactions and products that make someone feel good. Individuals want a way to prosper that contributes to the greater good.

The most successful direct sellers open up a whole new income stream for themselves and others. Most people trade time for money and they are trapped into the need to produce to earn. Thanks to the internet the traditional neighborhood business model can expand. The reasons that starting a new or expanding an existing business is easier now than ever is because of the technology advances.

Direct selling has changed and it is possible to join this thriving community and prosper. In all the years that I have encounter direct selling companies I was always was turned off. I was not a fan of direct sales because it seemed intimidating and most people who got in late spent more than they made. I could not get excited enough about a product to introduce it. There is a change in how some of these companies operate and why they choose this method to bring their products to market.

What changed? Well just about everything from selling to the ability to build a retirement income from direct sales. Times have changed and the economic climate dictates that you expand and monetize your cliental. There are new and emerging companies run by young entrepreneurs that are organic, green, and superior to any products around. It isn't only that they know what the consumer wants but the founders are environmentally friendly. Some have devoted their lives to saving the planet.

To these entrepreneurs it is the best avenue for putting the product in the hands of the consumer. Some of these companies you may not have heard of, because they are specifically for health conscious individuals and do not use heavy handed marketing. The great thing about these companies, there is little or no fee to become a distributor. The huge difference is you do not have to track down every relative, friend, and co-worker and bombard them with information on the virtues of your products.

The changing face of network marketing has resulted in a new class of millionaires. With the internet it is possible to thrive and prosper in the direct selling world.
